

THOMAS MANN: “DEMOCRACY WILL WIN”

An exhibition by Literaturhaus München and VATMH in co-operation with the Max Kade Center for German-American Studies at the University of Kansas, realized with the generous support of the German Federal Foreign Office.

Thomas Mann, Pacific Palisades
Amalfi Drive, 1941 TMA_3026

Thomas Mann was a German author who fled to the United States in 1939 when his critiques of Hitler's regime made Germany unfriendly to him. This exhibition focuses on the remarkable evolution of Thomas Mann's political biography: from monarchist to powerful opponent of National Socialism and committed champion of democracy.
